Main Topics

- Miscellaneous

Dear esteemed colleagues,

we are inviting you to our upcoming congress with confidence that we, as doctor acupuncturists, are prepared to meet the challenges of the next years and decades. We remain in the vanguard, anticipating the obstacles healthcare workers will face due to the changing reality of life on this planet.

The demographic situation is changing, the number of chronic non-infectious diseases is increasing worldwide affecting more and more people in the productive age. Over the past years, we have witnessed more than the healthcare sector going through a burdensome test. Once again, the significance of prevention has been confirmed.

The essence was poetically captured by a quote from the master philosopher Lao-C' (6th century BC)

“The small is easy to scatter;
Solve it before it happens;
Order it before chaos emerges;
A tree as wide as a man's embrace grows from a tiny shoot.”

Historically, acupuncture has had an important preventive aspect in the context of traditional Chinese medicine. Our congress shall become a meeting place with colleagues, a place of inspiration, exchange of experiences, but also an example and a call to those in charge to look for effective solutions and help to treat this unfortunate state.

I wish all participants and supporters of XXXII. Congressus acupuncturae Slovaciae et Bohemiae a lot of success.
